The problems that cancer patients are facing today regarding pain and other clinical conditions go far beyond the simple use of anti-inflammatory drugs and strong medications intended to control their symptom such as opioid drugs. The worst part is that, even when using these medications, many patients do not experience improvement in their symptoms, in this new phase that we are facing, that is this New Global Immunodeficiency [1].

This immunodeficiency was discovered by Huang in 2014, when she analyzed 1000 patients from 2014-2020 from her clinic in Brazil, showing that at that time 90% of all her patients were in the lowest level of energy in all the five internal massive organs of the five elements theory of Traditional Chinese Medicine (Liver, Heart, Lungs, Spleen, Kidney), rated one out of eight, independent on the age group or the type of diagnosis. [-2] If we measure the energy of these patients today, the rate increased to 100%.

In a patient whom we were recently treating in our clinic in Brazil at Wu Wei Institute, he had undergone prostate cancer removal approximately eight years earlier. Following the procedure, he developed urinary incontinence and sexual dysfunction, which did not improve with the prescribed medications and was using diaper [3].

It was only after rebalancing and replenishing the internal energies of these five internal solid organs (Liver, Heart, Spleen, Lungs and Kidney) using highly diluted medications, that these conditions of urinary incontinence and sexual dysfunction began to improve. He managed to stop using diapers and also succeeded in normalizing his sexual functions after starting this treatment [3].

This patient experienced many ups and downs throughout his clinical course, primarily related to his emotional state such as anxiety and insomnia-since his family had wanted him to undergo chemotherapy with an oncologist. However, solely through energy-replenishment treatment, he managed to lower his PSA level from an initial 25 ng/dL to 0 ng/dL after beginning treatment to restore energy to the five organs, alongside Chinese dietary therapy and acupuncture [3].

Most of the time, his laboratory test results worsened, with increasing Prostate-Specific Antigen levels whenever he used any highly concentrated medication, including medications to control pain, anxiety and insomnia and his chemotherapy to treat his cancer, prescribed by his oncologist [4].

What we are seeing today is that medications intended to treat specific conditions are failing to produce the desired effect in the face of this New Global Immunodeficiency; in fact, most highly concentrated drugs further exacerbate the underlying energy deficit these patients already suffer from. Instead of improving the patient's condition, these medications often result in no change, worsen symptoms, or lead to new complications—or even death [1, 5-6].

This was demonstrated by the Arndt-Schulz law, formulated in 1888 by two German scientists. The use of highly concentrated medications—whether anti-inflammatories, anxiolytics, antidepressants, chemotherapeutic agents, etc.—can cause a significant drop in vital energy. By further depleting the energy levels already low in these patients, such drugs increase the risk of thrombosis (due to blood stagnation), myocardial infarction (if stagnation occurs in the coronary arteries), stroke (if it affects the central nervous system), or even sudden death, as described in certain articles [6-9].

Dr. Huang was always working behind the scenes of his case, trying to control and restore his internal energy so that he could overcome the difficult phase of having to undergo chemotherapy to control his Prostate-Specific Antigen levels, control his anxiety and insomnia symptoms, which rose to more than 200 nanograms per deciliter in January 2026 while he stopped to do the acupuncture sessions due to the vacation of his Chinese medicine's doctor. Before November 2025, his PSA was less than 13ng/dl (at this time, he was already using chemotherapy, and worsened when we stopped completely to do the auricular acupuncture with apex ear bloodletting sessions and continued to treat his prostate cancer condition only using chemotherapy (which is considered highly concentrated medication), causing aggravation of his energy deficiency situation, instead of improvement [3, 6].

Based on clinical observations of this specific patient—who had bowed legs and bone metastases diagnosed by an oncologist—he experienced no pain while undergoing energy replacement therapy using the highly diluted remedies of Constitutional Homeopathy of the Five Elements Based on Traditional Chinese Medicine. This is because the root cause of most clinical manifestations lies in underlying energy imbalances; when these imbalances at the “root of the tree” are treated, clinical manifestations across all medical specialties improve simultaneously, even if the physician is unaware that the patient has a particular symptom or condition [10].

For this reason, Huang knew that what was controlling his pain crises was the energy treatment because many times when the patient went to his oncologist doctor, he usually asked him if he was suffering from pain in the legs and he always said that he was not presenting any kind of pain, even having all that metastasis in his legs. This happened because all his energy imbalances and deficiencies were been treated using Chinese medicine's tools such as acupuncture to restore the energy alterations in these organs, Chinese dietary counseling to keep the energy in harmony, to do not cause any disequilibrium using the wrong diet and replenishing the energy of the five internal massive organs using highly diluted medications according to Constitutional Homeopathy of the Five Elements Based on Traditional Chinese Medicine [10].

In the meantime, he fell and fractured his right leg, requiring surgery—during which he received potent medications, such as anesthetics and antibiotics to prevent infection—causing an imbalance in his internal energy and leading to greater deficiencies; consequently, he began to experience increased pain, a symptom that had not been present when he was not using such highly concentrated medications [5, 12].

Furthermore, the very use of metal objects within the body contributed to a further drop in already low internal energy, predisposing the patient to pain—their primary symptom at the time. However, other clinical manifestations could also arise, such as hypertension, elevated blood glucose, depression, insomnia, anxiety, thrombosis, myocardial infarction, or stroke. Had any of these episodes occurred, Western medical doctors would inevitably have been treated in isolation, failing to address the root cause: the energy depletion exacerbated by the use of medications commonly prescribed and used in daily life [11-16].

Another patient I was treating—who had prostate cancer and had come to the institute to treat his vitiligo—had not initially disclosed his cancer diagnosis; however, following the vitiligo treatment (which addresses the root cause of energy imbalances), his PSA level dropped from an initial 16 ng/dL to 1.6 ng/dL. This same patient later underwent cataract surgery requiring the use of highly concentrated medications—such as anesthetics and eye drops—which caused his PSA level to rise again to 9.6 ng/dL [17].

The same thing happened with this patient when he underwent vitamin therapy and stopped coming to acupuncture sessions for over two months. When he returned, I did not recognize him; his vitiligo—which had previously been more controlled—had worsened significantly, spreading to the area around his mouth and eyes, and his PSA level had risen back to 16 ng/dL after we had managed to lower it to 1.6 ng/dL through energy treatment addressing the deficient elements associated with this New Global Immunodeficiency [18].

Therefore, what the authors would like to report in this article is that the use of medications to treat any kind of symptoms in cancer patients in this New Global Immunodeficiency may not provide benefits to oncology patients nowadays and may only generate additional side effects, such as thrombosis, myocardial infarction, and pulmonary embolism, or even increasing the chance to have recurrency of their cancer or increase the chance to have metastasis in another place or develop a new cancer, as the energy deficiency situation can aggravate and cause more immunodeficiency, instead of improving it [1, 5-6, 8-9].

For this reason, the authors would like to say in this short article that it is very important to treat their energy deficiency situation, caused by this New Global Immunodeficiency, and also, use less highly concentrated medications of any type, to do not cause more energy deficiency in these patients and cause complications or even death of them, as occurred with this specific patient presented in this article, whose case Huang et al. are reporting today, who passed away on this day (06-22-2026) [1, 19-20].

The authors are writing this article in this specific patient honor to clarify the many forms of suffering that oncology patients must endure and the risks associated with the use of any highly concentrated medication in this New Global Immunodeficiency. In this particular case, the medication used to control his pain, anxiety, insomnia, and the prostate cancer itself could contribute to worsen the energy deficiency condition and lead to more complications or even death, as showed by Arndt-Schultz Law [1, 7].

For this reason, in all cancer patients nowadays in this New Global Immunodeficiency, it is important to treat the energy deficiencies that they have in the background, that are usually not visible to the naked eyes and could reduce the chance to have severe complications because of the treatment itself. The restoration of this lack of energy and do all measurements to do not reduce the energy again (preventing them from the use of highly concentrated medications, preventing to put metallic implants inside the body, and use more highly diluted medications to treat any kind of symptoms that they need to use such as when they are having flu-like symptoms, insomnia, pain, anxiety, etc) can save the patients live or extend this patient's lifespan with a better quality of life [1, 10].
